Tawaraya Sotatsu, Wind God and Thunder God, Edo period, 17th century, Kenninji Temple, National Treasure
(On exhibit from 22 December [Tue], 2020 to 24 January [Sun], 2021)

Édouard Manet, Chrysanthemums, c.1881, The Museum of Modern Art, Ibaraki

The Rimpa school of painting was initiated by Tawaraya Sotatsu in the early seventeenth century. It evolved through the work of Ogata Korin in the early eighteenth century and Sotatsu's and Korin's colleagues in context of the townsman culture of Kyoto, then Japan's imperial capital. In the early nineteenth century, Rimpa was carried on by artists such as Sakai Hoitsu and Suzuki Kiitsu, in Edo (today's Tokyo), the shogun's headquarters. In Edo, the evolving Rimpa school became an urban genre with a decorative aesthetic at its core.

Impressionism was an innovative, modern school of art that emerged in Europe in the latter half of the nineteenth century. Centered on Paris, the Impressionists included artists such as Édouard Manet, Claude Monet, Edgar Degas, Pierre-Auguste Renoir, and Paul Cézanne who candidly expressed their impressions of their everyday experiences and the delights of urban lifestyles.

This exhibition is an innovative attempt to compare and survey, through works by artistic geniuses nurtured by urban cultures in Japan and Europe, East and West, what the sophisticated aesthetics characteristic of major metropolises achieved. The exhibition includes the Impressionist masterpieces that are the core of our collection and Rimpa works from our collection being shown for the first time, plus masterworks from temples and museums in Japan. The hundred exhibits include two National Treasures and seven Important Cultural Properties. Rimpa and Impressionism, a watershed exhibition, makes "urban culture" its lens in reassessing Eastern and Western art.

Claude Monet was fascinated by the beauty of natural light in natural settings and dedicated his life to exploring it and seeking ways to express it. The landscape paintings that this giant among the Impressionists created utterly overturned traditional approaches to painting. His work became a means of communicating the worldview and poetic sentiments of a new era. Sylvie Patry, Chief Curator and Director for Curatorial Affairs and Collections at the Musée d'Orsay, supervised this exhibition, which combines works from the Musée d'Orsay, which has the world's finest Monet collection, with works from collections in Japan to present a comprehensive view of Monet's landscape paintings. Le Havre, Argenteuil, Vétheuil, Giverny, Venice: this exhibition explores Monet's oeuvre, in each period and place. What did he see in each of his chosen places, how did he depict it, and what themes did he incorporate in his paintings? This close examination of his work reveals the distinctive characteristics of Monet's landscape paintings.

Jam Session: The Ishibashi Foundation Collection × Morimura Yasumasa A Gift of the Sea, M-Style Morimura Yasumasa' s Auto-Mythology

2 October [Sat],2021 - 10 January [Mon], 2022

MORIMURA Yasumasa, Self Portrait in My Youth (Aoki' s Self Portrait/Youth), 2016, collection of the artist

Jam Session is a joint performance by the Ishibashi Foundation Collection and a contemporary artist. For our second session, we welcome Morimura Yasumasa, who has, since 1985, when he produced a self-portrait photograph in which he had dressed himself to resemble van Gogh' s self portrait, he has continued to create “self portrait-ish works” in which he disguises himself as the person in a painting or photograph—choosing sources from diverse periods and cultures—and recreates it, adding his own interpretations. Morimura has long had a secret love of the works by Aoki Shigeru in our museum and created works inspired by Aoki' s Self Portrait (1903) and A Gift of the Sea (1904). For this Jam Session, Morimura addresses A Gift of the Sea head on. He gives shape to the history of the many changes in Japanese culture, politics, and thought since the Meiji period, when Aoki created that work, in his own Morimura-style, or M-style, A Gift of the Sea. He has elevated his ardent feelings for Aoki into a new series of works.

*For a shortened form of the exhibition title, please use Jam Session: A Gift of the Sea, M-Style Morimura Yasumasa' s Auto-Mythology or Jam Session: Morimura Yasumasa' s A Gift of the Sea, M-Style

Venue: 6F Gallery

Hours: 10:00 – 18:00

(Evening hours, with the museum open until 20:00 on Fridays, have been suspended until further notice.)

*Last admission 30 minutes before closing.

Education and Outreach —What’ s That? The Living Museum

2 October [Sat], 2021 - 10 January [Mon], 2022

Pierre-Auguste RENOIR, Mlle Georgette Charpentier Seated, 1876, Artizon Museum, Ishibashi Foundation

“Education and Outreach Activities” —have you heard that phrase with reference to art museums? Museums have the power to connect people and objects, people and people, people and memories, and to create new narratives. Education and outreach activities prepare and provide access routes to art for all. The Artizon Museum has, since our Bridgestone Museum days, conducted gallery talks (for the general public), school programs (for educational institutions), family programs (for families), outreach (activities extending beyond the walls of the museum), and workshops. These programs’ main focus is our collection. Now we present the enormous wealth of all those programs, held thus far at the museum and the Ishibashi Foundation Art Research Center, plus the signature works of art that have been featured in those programs.
